

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. # PREFACE

THE decision arrived at last year (in the absence of the original compiler from the Colony) to publish this Handbook in respect of the official financial year having been found inconvenient to the public, its issue for the calendar year is resumed, the book not being an official publication.

The compiler desires to take this opportunity of expressing his grateful acknowledgment of the continued support and appreciation extended to the Handbook, which now has a wide circulation.

DESCRIPTIVE SKETCH OF THE COLONY

GEOGRAPHY AND TOPOGRAPHY

THE colony of Grenada (which was discovered by Columbus on August 15, 1498, and called by him 'Conception') comprises the island of that name and the Grenadine islands to the south of the island of Carriacou, including that island, and lying between it and Grenada; also certain small islets adjacent to the northern, eastern, and southern coasts of Grenada.

Grenada is the most southerly of the British West Indian colonies included in the Government of the Windward Islands, and is situated about 90 miles to the north of Trinidad, 60 miles north-west of Tobago, 68 miles south-south-west of St. Vincent, and 100 miles south-west of Barbados; the lighthouse on Fort George in the chief town at the south of the island is in 12° 3' 2" north latitude, and 4 h. 6 m. 59.40 sec. longitude west of Greenwich. It is about 21 miles long and 12 miles at its greatest breadth, and contains, according to the census of 1891, 76,548 acres, about 120 square miles.

The island is in shape an irregular oblong, lying due north and south, broader at its southern than its northern end, and a backbone of mountains traverses the whole length of it, closer to the western than the eastern seaboard, the highest points, according to the survey made in 1858-59 by Captain Parsons, R.N., being Mount St. Catherine, 2,749 feet, Mount Sinai, 2,300 feet, and the mountain over the Grand Etang lake, 2,014 feet. From the north-east end and along the east and south-east the mountains gradually slope off to the sea, the tract of country there situated being, therefore, comparatively level; but on the whole of the west coast, up to and including the northern end, the mountains run down to the sea. The south coast is indented by numerous natural harbours.

In consequence of this formation the island is singularly beautiful. Whether viewed from the sea or from one of its own forest-clad heights, the imposing scene leaves on the mind an impression of peaceful repose, while the richly coloured tropical vegetation satisfies the eye with its many varieties of light and shade. It is abundantly watered, being intersected in every direction by streams of the purest water.

Carriacou (the Carib name of which was 'Carriouacou') lies about 20 miles to the north of Grenada, the approximate situation of Hillsborough, the town of the island, being 12° 29' north latitude and 4 h. 5 m. 52 sec. longitude west of Greenwich. Although of mountainous formation, its hills do not attain the same height as in Grenada, and as the peaks are of more pointed shape than in that island, and have been almost denuded of their trees, the appearance of the dependency, while vested with a beauty of its own, is entirely different to that of the larger island. Its area was returned at the census of 1891 as 8,467 acres, about 13 square miles. There are no streams in the island, the water supply being derived from wells, tanks, and ponds. The highest point is a hill in the north, 980 feet, and Chapeau Carré in the south, 960 feet, comes next. There is an extensive natural harbour, completely land-locked, adjoining Harvey Vale Bay on the south-west of the island, which is famous for a delicious oyster found on the mangroves growing in the water. Some of the larger of the adjacent islets are inhabited, the people supporting themselves chiefly by fishing.

GEOLOGICAL FORMATION

Professor Harrison, the Government Analyst of British Guiana, visited the colony in 1895 with the object of selecting typical soils for analysis, and from his valuable report, which has been published in pamphlet form, the following extracts are made:

'Practically the island of Grenada is purely volcanic in its origin, the only signs of upheaval being raised limestone beaches towards the extreme north. No evidence with regard to its geological age was obtainable during my visit, but the probabilities are that it is of somewhat older origin than the majority of the volcanic islands of the West Indian Archipelago.'

'The chief centres of eruption appear to have been in the neighbourhood of Mount St. Catherine, in that of the Grand Etang, where at present the mountain pond probably occupies the place of a former crater; near Mount Sinai, in the neighbourhood of the South East Mountain, and in what is now St. George's Bay. A very perfect subsidiary ash crater, in my opinion, probably of later date than the mountain craters, is represented by Lake Antoine, whilst Levera Pond may also be the site of a former ash crater.'

'Below from 700 to 800 feet elevation the valleys are principally cut in beds of volcanic conglomerate, tuffs, and ashes, frequently intersected by dykes of basaltic and andesitic lavas.'

'At elevations above 700 feet beds of volcanic conglomerate and tuffs are far less common, the hillsides consisting chiefly of disintegrated lavas of various kinds, the fragmental materials having doubtless been removed by the great amount of denudation which the rocks have undergone. Partially decomposed lavas possessing to some extent the properties of pozzuolano are of frequent occurrence, and are locally termed "tuff."'

'Upon examination the specimens of lavas which I collected during my visit are found to fall into five classes, as follows: I. Hornblende andesite. II. Hornblende angite andesite. III. Angite enstatite andesite. IV. Angite andesite with olivine. V. Olivine basalts. The first and second groups are very closely allied and shade one into the other. In places, as at Mount Hermon, the second group may be found passing into the fourth, whilst the fourth grades almost imperceptibly into the fifth. The grand mass of the basalts of the island is, as a rule, distinctly andesitic in structure.'

'The island of Carriacou appears to be in the main composed of beds of fine-grained volcanic sands and tuffs. On the eastern slopes of the island and at Belair, at an altitude of 600 feet, the tuffs of which the hills are composed are covered with layers from 10 to 20 inches in thickness of a shallow water foraminiferal limestone, which upon microscopical examination was found to be made up principally of amphistiginae, and organisms apparently the remains of calcareous algae. As far, therefore, as I was able to examine Carriacou, it appears to consist of layers of volcanic ashes which were deposited in the sea and afterwards covered with a foraminiferal shallow water limestone. Later, this was subjected to upheaval, with the result that part of the limestone was raised to at least 600 feet above sea level.'

HISTORY

(An outline of the history of the colony from 1498 to 1895 will be found in the Handbook for 1897.)

POLITICAL CONSTITUTION

The constitution is that of a Crown Colony, the Crown having the entire control of legislation, and the administration being carried on by officers under the control of the Imperial Government. The Governor, who is also the Governor of the colonies of St. Lucia and St. Vincent, Grenada being the headquarters of the Government of the Windward Islands, is assisted in the administration by the advice of two Councils, the Executive and the Legislative. The former is composed of the Governor or officer administering the Government, the officers discharging the duties of Colonial Secretary, Attorney-General, and Treasurer, and of such other officers or persons resident in the colony as may be appointed thereto by His Majesty the King. There are at present two unofficial members. The Legislative Council is composed of the Governor or officer administering the Government, who presides, and has an original vote as a member, as well as a casting vote as President, and of equal numbers of official and unofficial members appointed by the Sovereign, the Colonial Secretary, Attorney-General, and Treasurer, having seats on the official side ex officio. There are at present fourteen members of Legislative Council altogether, including the Governor. The unofficial members hold their seats for six years, but are eligible for re-appointment.

The Government is assisted in the internal administration of the colony by thirteen local boards, six of which are entrusted with the affairs of the towns, and seven—one for each parish—with road administration. These boards are also the local health authorities for their several districts, subject to the control of a central Board of Health, appointed by the Governor.

TOWNS

In each parish of the island, except St. David's, and in Carriacou there is a seaport town, the administration and control of which are entrusted to a local board, which in St. George's is styled the Town Board, and is half elected by the ratepayers and half nominated by the Governor, and in the other towns is wholly elected by the ratepayers, and styled the Parochial Board. In each of the towns in the out-districts and at St. David's Court House there is a branch of the Treasury, Savings Bank, and Post Office, and, except in Carriacou, a Telephone Exchange.

St. George's (population, 1901, 5,134, the chief town of the colony, is situated on a promontory of land at the south-western extremity of the island. Viewed from the sea its appearance is singularly picturesque and interesting, as the steep sides of the promontory, which projects into the sea in a southerly direction, are covered with brick houses, whose red-tiled roofs contrast pleasantly with the rich green tropical vegetation surrounding them. The ridge of the hill is crowned with three churches, and the highest point of the peninsula, its southern extremity, is occupied by a fine old fort which dates from 1706: the two parts of the town are connected by a short tunnel which pierces the intervening hill. On the north, east, and south-east the town and harbour are surrounded by an amphitheatre of hills rising from 400 to 2,000 feet, those in the immediate vicinity being dotted with fortifications, dating from 1784. On the south and west is a roadstead, open to the west and south-west, where hundreds of vessels can lie at anchor, secure from everything but a south-westerly gale, of the occurrence of one of which there is no record. To the east is the land-locked harbour known locally as the Carenage, with its entrance opening to the south-south-west, and covering an area of about 120 acres.

It will be conceded by all who know the place that St. George's offers, owing to its situation, healthiness, and great natural advantages, exceptional inducements to steamers as a port of call in this part of the West Indies. It is in telegraphic communication with the rest of the world, telegrams to Europe costing 4s. 11½d. ($1.19) per word, and to New York 3s. 11d. (94 cents); and, the colony being in the Postal Union, letters to all parts of the world (other than the United Kingdom and most of the British possessions<sup>1</sup> with which there is a penny postage rate per half-ounce) are forwarded at the uniform rate of 2½d. (5 cents, or 25 centimes) per half-ounce. There is regular fortnightly communication with England by the steamers of the Royal Mail Steam Packet Company, and three times a month with New York by the steamers of the Trinidad Shipping Company's line, proceeding to New York direct from Grenada, and calling there first on the outward voyage. The steamers of Scrutton's line also call fortnightly with cargo from Great Britain, and return at about the same intervals for cargo. Through passages to England via New York can be secured by the above line of steamers, which are comfortably fitted for passengers.

Communication with Canada has also recently been established by a contract between the Canadian Government and Messrs. Pickford & Black's Steamship Company, Limited, whose steamers call at Grenada along with the other West India Colonies once every month on an outward voyage from, and once every month on a homeward voyage to, Halifax, N.S., taking passengers and cargo.

Steamers drawing up to 22 feet can be coaled alongside the wharf in the inner harbour, but the coal depôt established in 1895 is at present without a supply. Water of the purest description is supplied by the Town Board in any quantity at the very moderate charge of 1s. (24 cents) per 100 gallons. Vessels can take it either alongside, when 'coaling, or lying close up to the wharf, hydrants with hose and meters being supplied. Provisions, liquors, and ships' supplies can be purchased in any reasonable quantity, in bond, or with a rebate of import duty, at a small advance upon English and American prices. Tropical fruit is plentiful and good—Trollope declared that 'Grenada was the headquarters of the world for fruit'; fresh fish, poultry, and meat, particularly mutton, are good and easily obtained, and excellent sheep of the English South Down breed may be purchased, there being three large sheep farms in the vicinity of the town. Ice is obtainable at a halfpenny (1 cent) per pound from two factories overlooking the harbour. Coals are free from import duty.

Ordinary repairs, not requiring special technical knowledge and appliances, can be executed by the Public Works Department of the colony, and two or three very successful jobs have recently been done. In the shelter of the harbour steamers have fitted propeller shafts in perfect security. Small craft are constantly hove down and repaired here, and in the old days large frigates used to be similarly treated. There is no dock or slip at present.

There are no harbour dues of any kind or description, the port being absolutely free.

The rise and fall of the tide are insignificant, being only 12 to 18 inches. There are three steamers belonging to the Royal Mail Steam Packet Company under contract with the Government for the conveyance of mails and passengers along the coasts of the colony; their tonnage varies from 61 to 180 tons, and the indicated horse-power of their engines from 152 to 360. These are frequently employed in towing vessels, the usual charges being from 3*l.* to 5*l.* ($14.40 to $24.00) according to the size of the vessel towed. Messrs. Martin, Dean, & Co. are the agents.

The island is covered with a network of telephone lines, every place of importance in it being connected with the system. The water in the Carenage is so calm and the other conditions so perfect that vessels moored therein are connected with this system on payment of a fee of 5*s.* ($1.20) for the first day and 1*s.* (24 cents) for each subsequent day; rapid and simple communication with agents can thus be secured within half an hour after mooring. There is no charge for ships of war so connected.

In point of healthiness St. George's is second to no West Indian town. Yellow fever has not visited the island in an epidemic form for about 100 years, and the last sporadic cases occurred in 1881, when the disease was epidemic in neighbouring islands. The late chief medical officer of the colony, who was in practice here for forty years, stated that in that period he had 'only known of ten cases of yellow fever, the majority of which were contracted out of the colony, and the subjects were all Europeans.'

By an amended quarantine law passed in 1895 the incubation period of cholera is declared to be six days, that of yellow fever ten days, and of small-pox fourteen days. Steamers' requiring coal, which arrive at the port from a place where any of the above infectious diseases exist at the time of their arrival, or have existed at the time of their departure from such place, or arriving after an absence therefrom of less than the incubation period of the disease, are carefully inspected by the health officer, and, if the circumstances justify it, are permitted to coal alongside in the inner harbour under quarantine restrictions; in doubtful cases they are allowed to anchor at the entrance to the Carenage, and are there coaled from lighters. There is a quarantine station pleasantly situated on a promontory four miles to the south of the town.

A dioptric fixed white light of the 5th order is placed on the north bastion of Fort George, 192 feet above sea-level, showing its light seaward over an arc of 104°, the beams on the S.S.W. just clearing the shoals around Point Salines, and those on the N.N.W. the shoals near Molinière Point, so that vessels approaching the port at night have only to keep in the arc of light to be free from danger.<sup>1</sup> The actual position of this light, which is visible for ten miles, is 12° 3' 2" north latitude and 4 h. 6 m. 59.40 sec. longitude west of Greenwich. Pilotage is not compulsory, and the charges for vessels taking the pilot are as follow:—

	£	s.	d.	8
Under 50 tons . . . . .	0	7	6	or 1.80
50 and under 200 tons . . . . .	0	15	0	„ 3.60
200 and under 400 tons . . . . .	1	1	0	„ 5.04
400 tons and upwards . . . . .	1	10	0	„ 7.20

The approach to the Carenage is, however, so easy that most masters rarely require a pilot more than once. There is a signal station on Fort George at the entrance to the harbour, where the International Code is in use, and the station is in telephonic communication with the rest of the island.

Grenville, or Labaye, comes next in importance to St. George's, although its population—1,414 in 1901—is less than that of Gouyave. This is due to the situation of the town, which is built on low-lying swampy land adjoining the beach of a large bay on the east of the island in St. Andrew's parish, and is consequently not very healthy, so that all of the better classes live on the hills to the west of the town. The bay is protected from the Atlantic by a large coral reef with a narrow and difficult passage through it, but within this natural barrier the water is quite calm, and there is an excellent jetty at which ships load and discharge their cargoes. An abundant supply of pure water is available for the shipping at moderate rates. There is a pilot provided by the Town Board, the fees being as follows:—

For every square-rigged vessel drawing 18 feet and upwards . . . . .	5	5	0
For every square-rigged vessel drawing less than 18 feet . . . . .	4	4	0
For every schooner not less than 60 tons . . . . .	2	0	0
For every trading sloop schooner not qualified in the island as a drogher . . . . .	1	0	0
For every drogher . . . . .	0	10	0

The difficulty which used to be experienced formerly by sailing vessels in getting out of the harbour is now removed by the presence of the coasting steamers of the Royal Mail Steam Packet Company, which can be hired as tugs.

Charlotte Town, or Gouyave (population in 1901, 2,455), is built on the shore of an open roadstead on the west coast of the island, about twelve miles to the north of St. George's by road. There is a good jetty for landing passengers and cargo.

Sauteurs,<sup>2</sup> the town of St. Patrick's parish, on the north of the island, the population of which in 1901 was 1,139, derives its name from having been the scene of an atrocious massacre of aborigines during the French occupation, a number of the wretched Caribs being forced at the point of the bayonet over the cliff overlooking the bay, which was thereupon named by the French 'Le Morne des Sauteurs,' or 'Leapers' Hill.' There is a landing jetty.

Victoria, or Grand Pauvre, is the town of St. Mark's parish. Its population in 1901 was 1,704. It is built on the shore of an open bay on the west of the island, about four miles to the north of Gouyave, and eight to the south of Sauteurs. A jetty is available for landing.

Hillsborough is the town of the dependency of Carriacou, and has a population of 802. It stands on flat land adjoining the seashore of a large bay on the west of that island. The coasting steamers visit Hillsborough from Grenada once a week. There is at present no landing jetty.

AGRICULTURE

The present prosperity of Grenada depends entirely upon the products of her soil, and even although her other natural gifts indicate the possibility of the development of other sources of income in the future, it is evident that the foundation upon which her progress is built lies in the cultivation of the soil. During the struggle with adverse conditions that followed the emancipation of the slaves in the West Indies, Grenada succeeded in emancipating herself, in complete opposition to the wishes and ideas of the planters of those days, from that exclusive devotion to the sugar-cane which has proved the bane of many of her less fortunate neighbours. All the sugar that is manufactured, and it is not of a high quality, is consumed locally by the peasantry. Most of the sugar works that are still kept up exist chiefly for the distillation of rum, for which there is a profitable market locally, the annual consumption being about 60,000 gallons.

The staple product is cocoa, which is backed by a valuable auxiliary in the shape of spices, chiefly nutmegs, and coffee is also successfully cultivated. The kola-nut (Cola acuminata) has received attention latterly, and if there is a future before this product, Grenada will be able to take a good place in the market for it. Cotton, which was once so largely cultivated that towards the end of the eighteenth century upwards of 2,000,000 lb. were annually exported, has entirely ceased to be grown in the principal island, but continues to be the staple of Carriacou. The area of the land under cultivation in the several products is not accurately known.

The following is a brief outline of the cultivation of cocoa and nutmegs and of their preparation for export, as practised in the island. Cocoa.—The seeds taken from the ripe pods are sown either in nursery beds, and afterwards transplanted, or at stake in the field. When large areas of fresh land are taken up for cultivation, the latter method is preferred, as the plants grow stronger and more uniformly, but for supplying vacancies in young fields the nursery plants are generally used. These should be about 18 inches high, and should be transplanted on a rainy day, care being taken to have a ball of earth attached to the roots to ensure success. In sowing seeds at stake those from the best varieties are selected, and are planted three in a hole about 6 inches apart. The young plants, whether seeds or nursery plants, are put out at distances varying from 8 to 10 feet apart, and a banana planted near each. The banana serves for both stake and shade, and marks the spot, ensuring protection when weeding. Very little shade is used beyond this, for in Grenada it is found that cocoa does infinitely better when protected from the wind, but exposed to the full sunlight.

The bearing stage varies considerably according to the quality and locality of the soil and the amount of care bestowed on the cultivation. In Grenada, cocoa thrives from the sea-level up to 1,700 feet, but beyond 800 feet its yield is uncertain. An elevation of from 300 to 500 feet is probably the best, and in good soil, with proper care, the trees will commence to bear in two-and-a-half to three years, but nothing like a crop may be expected before the fifth year. Catch crops of plantains, potatoes, and tannias may be raised through the young plants, and will repay in a great measure the expense of establishing the cocoa. The trees bear nearly all the year round, but there are two marked crops, one from October to January, and the other from April to June. On a highly cultivated and well-manured estate, however, there is practically no cessation, as at any time a few ripe pods will be found. When the pods are fully ripe the picking commences. This is done by men supplied with a specially adapted knife affixed to the end of a bamboo rod. These knives are kept very sharp, as the pod must be cut off clean without any ripping or tearing, which would materially damage the tree. Each man is attended by a woman with a basket, who gathers up the pods as fast as he cuts them off. The pods are made up into heaps under the trees, and in the afternoon, when the picking ceases, they are broken. This is very smartly done by the men with a single blow of a cutlass, and the women with their hands draw out the seeds, which are covered with a semi-acid mucilaginous pulp, and place them in baskets. When the breaking is completed the beans are taken to the sweating or fermenting house. This is generally an ordinary wooden building having a row of boxes inside. The floor is usually paved, and the bottoms of the boxes are pierced with holes to allow the juice to escape. The process of sweating is a most important one, as on it the quality of the cocoa depends. Into these boxes the wet cocoa beans, fresh from the field, are placed; they are then covered with dry plantain leaves or matting, and left to ferment for about three days; they are then shifted to another box, covered up again, and allowed to ferment for two or three days longer. The object of changing them is to ensure complete fermentation, because what was on the top of the first box goes to the bottom of the second, and so on. On the fifth or sixth day it will be found that the beans have lost all their pulp and have acquired a purplish brown colour. They are now fit for the drying trays. In Grenada the building containing these trays is known as the 'boucan,'<sup>1</sup> and usually consists, first of a large wooden platform over which a roof runs on wheels, so that when the sun is shining the roof is rolled back and the cocoa exposed; and on the approach of rain the roof is rolled over again. Underneath this fixed platform there are generally two tiers of shallow drawers or trays running on rails extending outside of the building. These also can be drawn out and pushed in as required. On these trays, and on the platform, the beans, fresh from the sweating boxes, are thinly spread and well rubbed. On the first day they are only given a few hours' sun, on the second they 'sun' a little longer, and on the third day they may be dried for the whole day. When they are thoroughly dry they are put up for shipment in bags of about 180 lb. weight.

On many of the larger estates the cocoa beans are now dried by hot air process instead of by exposure to the sun, which is obviously attended by an element of uncertainty and frequently causes deterioration in the value of the bean.

<sup>1</sup> One of the few Carib words surviving. The Boucan of the Carib village was the house wherein meat was hung up to be smoke-dried.

Nutmegs.—The usual plan of establishing a nutmeg orchard is to carefully select, for planting, the largest nuts procurable; these, when freshly gathered from the trees, are sown in nursery beds at two or three feet apart. In about four to six years, according to locality, the young plants begin to flower, or 'declare,' as it is termed locally. The male trees generally 'declare' earlier than the females, and bear a different flower; most of the males are cut out, a few being kept, in the proportion of one male to thirty females, for the purpose of fertilisation. When the female trees have 'declared,' and suitable weather offers, they are transplanted to the spot where it is intended to establish the cultivation. Here they are planted out at distances varying from fifteen feet to thirty feet apart, according to the taste of the planter, and the male trees evenly distributed between them. Care is taken that the transplanting is done in rainy weather, and that the roots are injured as little as possible; any broken roots are cut off with a sharp pruning knife. After transplanting, the trees are securely fastened to stakes, and, provided ordinary care has been taken in carrying out the foregoing details, the young tree seldom dies, and in a year or so it seems to have become quite accustomed to its new situation. The growth after this depends on the locality and the amount of care given to the plant. In about fifteen years after transplanting, the nutmeg tree will be fairly established, and, provided the plants have not been set out too far apart, will have commenced to cover the ground and touch each other. At this stage all cleaning work ceases, as neither grass nor weeds grow under nutmeg shade. The trees require but little pruning; all 'gormandising' suckers which tend to spoil the natural symmetry of the tree must be removed, and any low branches which interfere with a free passage under the trees, but beyond this no pruning is necessary. The yield commences from the time the young trees declare their sex, and, although at first it is very small, yet it gradually increases, year by year, until at about fifteen years the trees yield a quantity of nuts. With regard to the average yield in weight from a full-sized nutmeg-tree, the testimony of planters is rather conflicting, but it may fairly be said that a large tree, under favourable conditions, ought not to give less than 5,000 nuts per annum.

Harvesting is very simple, and consists of merely picking up the nuts every day from under the trees. When first gathered they are covered with a scarlet lace-like substance known commercially as 'mace.' This is taken off and dried for a short while in the sun; it is then closely packed in boxes for export. The nuts themselves are dried in a current of air for a few days, and afterwards in the full sunlight until they are quite cured. The hard shell is then broken with a small wooden mallet, care being taken not to bruise the kernel inside. The kernels are then assorted according to size and packed in barrels for export.

Nearly every tropical fruit, and of the best quality, is to be found in Grenada, and on the mountains some of the fruits of the temperate zone have been planted with successful results. The oranges have been pronounced by a competent authority to closely resemble the once famous 'St. Michael' orange, and the supply is abundant. As there is a direct steam-service with New York, this fruit only requires expert handling to be an important item of the exports, particularly since the failure of the Florida orange groves.<sup>1</sup> Logwood is fairly plentiful in the wild state, but

Ground provisions—in which term are included yams, tannias, sweet potatoes, koosh-koosh, manioc, plantains, corn, breadfruit, peas, &c.—are plentiful and cheap, and as the peasantry chiefly live upon these, their wants are easily supplied.

A Botanic Garden, which was the first of the new grade of Botanical Stations started in the West Indies on the recommendation of Dr. Morris, then Assistant Director of Kew Gardens,<sup>1</sup> was established in 1886 for the introduction of new plants and better methods of cultivation, native ideas on the subject being rather crude. Some good work has been done in both directions, and the garden itself presents a very creditable appearance. A herbarium of indigenous plants is in course of formation by the Curator. The Station has been since October 1, 1898, under the care of the Imperial Commissioner of Agriculture for the West Indies, Dr. Morris, and its up-keep will be paid from Imperial Funds for ten years from that date.

MONEY

British gold and silver coinage is the medium of circulation, and American gold and Spanish doubloons are also current. The dollar is taken as worth four shillings and twopence of British money. There is a branch of the Colonial Bank in St. George's, with an agency in Grenville, and the rate of exchange with London is about 1 per cent., while that with New York varies from par to  $1\frac{1}{2}$  per cent. The Bank and some merchants keep their accounts in dollars and cents, others adhere to pounds, shillings, and pence: the Government accounts are kept in the latter denomination.

POPULATION AND VITAL STATISTICS

The steady growth of the population of Grenada is shown by the results of the censuses that have been taken since the first regular enumeration in 1844, as shown below. The only exception to the regular increase is in the decennial period 1851–61, and that is due to the mortality from cholera in 1854, when 3,778 persons fell victims to this scourge.

The birth-rate in 1900 was 40·98, and the death-rate 19 per thousand.

<sup>1</sup> Since 1886 eight other stations have been started in the West Indies, and four on the West Coast of Africa.

CLIMATE AND METEOROLOGY

The climate of Grenada is singularly mild and salubrious for the tropics. The year is divided into two seasons—the dry season, which usually begins towards the end of January, and lasts to the full moon in May; and the wet season, which, as a rule, occupies the rest of the year; but of late years these seasons have been very irregular, and frequently overlap. The temperature in the dry season is most pleasant, at nights falling as low as 67° even on the lower lands, while on the mountains it is positively cold. In the wet season, as in all parts of the tropics, it is hot and oppressive, but, although 93° has on one or two exceptional days been recorded as the maximum, it may be accepted, as the result of actual experience, that 83° on the hills and 90° on the plains is about the normal highest shade temperature, and this only lasts for a few hours of the day, as the early mornings are usually cool, and so are the evenings. Gales are of rare occurrence, and hurricanes still more so<sup>1</sup>: the mercurial barometer at an elevation of 506 feet above sea level gives an annual average of thirty inches. Thunderstorms are also rare, and accidents from lightning the exception to the rule. Shocks of earthquake are felt every year, but they are not usually severe.

EDUCATION

There are forty schools of primary education in the colony, nine of which are 'Government' schools, supported altogether from the general revenue, and the others are 'grant-in-aid' schools, which received from public funds in 1900 contributions amounting to 3,738*l*. Eighteen of these schools belong to the Roman Catholic Church, seven to the Anglican, four to the Wesleyan, and two to the Church of Scotland. There were, in 1900, 9,731 pupils on the rolls, while the average daily attendance was 4,744.

The system in force is one of payment by results. Principal teachers receive fixed salaries varying from 20*l*. to 40*l*. per annum, according to the certificates of proficiency they hold, probationers being paid 20*l*. per annum.

Managers of schools are paid, for distribution among the teachers, an annual grant in proportion to the educational results as shown by examination, and they are also allowed for the same purpose the whole of the school fees paid by the pupils, which amounted in 1900 to 397*l*. A grant of 1*s*. a year is also made to them for each pupil who attends school on not less than 100 days in the year. This grant is designed to assist them in supplying school furniture, materials, and apparatus.

The administration of the system is under the control of a Board of Education, composed of equal numbers of Roman Catholic and non-Roman Catholic members, the Governor presiding and having only a casting vote. There is an Inspector of Schools, appointed by the Governor, who conducts the annual examinations on which the result grants are based, is Manager of the Government Schools, and exercises a general supervision over all of the schools.

There are three schools of secondary education in St. George's assisted by the Government, two for girls, and one for boys, a full description of which will be found under Part IV.

<sup>1</sup> Hurricanes in the Western hemisphere always commence in the Atlantic to the north of latitude 12° N., and this parallel passes through the south of Grenada.

FLORA AND FAUNA

In another part of this work will be found lists of the birds and animals of Grenada and of the various fishes which swarm in her seas.

There is good fishing in the rivers for mullet, brochet, sard, mudfish, &c. The mullet, brochet, and sard are fished for in the same way as trout, and good bags have been made with the Devon minnow. The mullet and brochet are very game fish; the brochet resembles the English pike in shape, but, when hooked, behaves in exactly the same way as the sewin. The sard is a flat fish and gives good play. As to sporting qualities the mudfish has none, but it is preferred by some for its taste. The usual baits of the native fisherman are the avocado pear, the green grasshopper, the red fig (banana), and sometimes worms and even cockroaches. Mullet are caught up to two pounds in weight, though one has been killed in the Great River in St. Andrew's, weighing, we are told, 12½ lb. Brochet and sard go up to five or six pounds, and mudfish have been caught with rod and line going up to two pounds. The rivers also abound in crayfish. In Lake Levera there is a large kind of fish called grand écaille. It is said locally that they will not take bait, but we have been assured by one fisherman that a fish once went for his Devon (a 4 inch) and touched it. The fish is very large and has large scales, but has not been identified. In the Grand Etang Lake there are crayfish, but, so far, nobody has succeeded in catching or seeing any other kind of fish there. There is also some shooting of the ramier and perdrix (wild pigeon and mountain dove) to be obtained in the season, which is from the beginning of August to the end of February.

A list of some of the principal trees and shrubs of the colony is appended<sup>1</sup>; and the beginnings of an excellent herbarium of indigenous plants may be inspected at the Botanic Station.

INFORMATION FOR TOURISTS

Grenada, with its charming tropical scenery and mild and healthy climate, ought to be a most attractive resort for tourists, and, when better known, and the hotel accommodation is on a larger scale, it will undoubtedly become a favourite rendezvous in the winter months. The best of the present hotels is 'The Home,' situated in Young and Monckton Streets, St. George's, within fifty yards of the wharf, and here the traveller will receive every attention for moderate charges. This hotel has recently been much improved under new management, and can be recommended.<sup>2</sup> In the town and its vicinity there are many places of interest that will repay a visit. There is the old fort with its romantic past; the Botanic Garden (easily reached by boat), where an hour or two may be pleasantly spent in the luxuriant vegetation of the tropics, and where tea, &c., is supplied by the proprietor of the Home Hotel on Tuesday afternoons when the mail arrives before 4.30 P.M.; the Queen's Park, where in the evenings tennis, cricket, and other open-air sports and games are enjoyed by the youth of the community; Richmond Hill, 750 feet up, with its chain of forts and Government institutions, whence a bird's-eye view of town and harbour may be obtained after twenty minutes' ride or drive; and last, but not least, the Carenage itself, which is perfect for boating. There is an excellent club located in a building facing the Carenage, which bears a well-deserved reputation for hospitality; and close by is a public library and reading room, open from 10 A.M. to 9 P.M., where the latest newspapers and periodicals can be perused free, and books can be borrowed on payment of a shilling per quarter. Perfect sea-bathing is obtainable at Grand Ance Bay, within fifteen minutes' row by boat, and may also be had, combined with a subsequent fresh-water douche, at the Spout in the Carenage.

The roads in the neighbourhood of St. George's are excellent and drivable, and buggies and ponies are to be had for hire.<sup>1</sup> Visitors will enjoy a ride of six miles to the Grand Etang, a lake situated 1,800 feet above sea level near the centre of the island. Forest paths round the lake and along an adjoining ridge enable those who do not mind somewhat rough walking to pass through virgin forest and to see views of tropical scenery which are difficult to surpass. Here will be found a Government rest-house, where refreshment<sup>2</sup> can be obtained, and, if desired, some pleasant days spent in the bracing mountain air. A Sanatorium has also been erected here, and is available for invalids and others to recuperate. The management of this and of the rest-house has been entrusted to the 'Home' Hotel, and visitors can be assured of receiving care and attention, and excellent refreshments. There is a macadamised path to the lake, good in all weathers, and two river skiffs are kept for hire at a moderate charge. The temperature here is very pleasant, rarely rising over 75°, and being often below 60°, and under the improved conditions recently established the place is much resorted to by local residents and by visitors from Trinidad. The rest-house is connected to the telephone system of the Colony. Not far from the lake is the mountain known as Morne Fédon, the headquarters of the rebels in 1795, where Lieutenant-Governor Home and forty-seven other white persons were massacred; from this point a commanding view of both sides of the island is obtained, and the plateau at the top is a favourite spot for picnic parties and camping out. On the north of the island there are two other pretty lakes, one known as Lake Antoine, situated on a mountain (both this and the Grand Etang were evidently old volcanic craters), and the other as Lake Levert.

There are four other towns in the island, reached either by road or steamer, to which visits may be paid, and a photographer would reap a rich harvest of tropical scenes. At the town of Sauteurs can be seen the precipice over which the French drove a number of Caribs into the sea at the point of the bayonet in the year 1651, the place being thereafter called 'Le Morne des Sauteurs,' or 'Leapers' Hill.' There are two Carib relics to be seen in the shape of sculptured stones, one at Mount Rich in St. Patrick's parish, and the other near the town of Victoria.

A steamer plies weekly between St. George's and the town of Hillsborough in the dependency of Carriacou, leaving at 9 A.M. on Wednesday and returning at 3 P.M. on Thursday, so that visits can easily be paid to that pretty island and its interesting natural harbour, the 'Grand Carenage,' from which a plentiful supply of excellent oysters is obtained in the season. From the Medical Officer's quarters at Belair, in the centre of the island, one of the most perfect views in the West Indies may be seen on a clear evening, when St. Vincent on the north and Grenada in the south, sixty-eight miles apart, with the chain of Grenadine islets lying like small gems in between them, are clearly visible.

SAVINGS BANK

A Government Savings Bank has been established since November 1881 at the Treasury, St. George's, and its operations were extended to the out-districts in 1889 by opening Branch Banks at each District Revenue Office.

The Bank is open to the public for the deposit and withdrawal of money daily throughout the year, except on Sundays and holidays, between the hours of 10 A.M. and 3 P.M.; Saturdays, 10 A.M. to 12 noon.

Deposits are received of one shilling and multiples thereof, not exceeding one hundred pounds in any year, or two hundred pounds altogether.

Interest is allowed at the rate of 3 per cent. per annum on all deposits of one pound and upwards, not exceeding £200.

Married women and minors can make and withdraw deposits in their own names. Deposits are, as a general rule, allowed to be withdrawn on demand, but ten days' delay is allowed to the Bank by law.

The affairs of the Bank are in a healthy condition, as will be seen from the subjoined statement of its transactions for the last five years; of the balance of £11,168 to credit of depositors at December 31, 1900, £11,000 was either invested or on deposit at 3 per cent. interest with the Colonial Bank.

THE COLONY HOSPITAL

Upon the removal of the Imperial Garrison from the colony the barracks in the precincts of Fort George were utilised as the principal hospital. These buildings are situated at the south-western extremity of the promontory on which the town of St. George's is built, a cool, healthy, and well-drained site. They were thoroughly reconstructed in 1896-7.

Cases requiring surgical assistance or special hospital treatment are admitted, if paupers, upon the recommendation of members of Council, ministers of religion, or justices of the peace, and treated gratuitously. Fees are chargeable to patients other than paupers, and such cases are admitted upon the order of the Colonial Secretary, after the necessary guarantee has been given for payment of the fees, which in the case of those admitted to the ordinary wards are 1s. per day, and if admitted to the private ward vary from 2s. to 5s. per day, according to the patient's means; children under 12 years of age are charged half rates. If a major operation is performed upon a patient in the private ward, the operating surgeon must be paid his customary fee, and if a patient therein is in a position to do so, he is required to pay the doctor's fees.

The number of cases treated in 1900 was 850, and the daily average for the year was 83.

DISTRICT HOSPITALS

There are two district hospitals, one in St. Andrew's parish, about a mile from the town of Grenville, and the other in the island of Carriacou, on the hill to the east of the town of Hillsborough. These hospitals are used for the reception of accidents and urgent cases, and cases that cannot conveniently be sent in to the Colony Hospital or Poor Asylum.

There is accommodation for 12 patients in the St. Andrew's Hospital, and for 18 at Carriacou; the daily averages in 1900 were 10 and 7 respectively.

Prescriptions are compounded at both institutions for the general public at fixed rates.

YAWS HOSPITAL

There is a hospital in St. George's, close to the Colony Hospital, for the special treatment of the disease known as Yaws (Framboesia). The building was formerly used as the Ordnance store. The cases are segregated here from the outside public until cured, the disease being highly contagious.

The law enables any medical officer, justice of the peace, minister of religion, or constable to cause a person afflicted with yaws to repair to or to be removed to this Hospital.

In the year 1900 183 cases were treated, and 105 were discharged cured.

LUNATIC ASYLUM

The old military barracks in Fort Matthew on Richmond Hill, about 700 feet above sea level, have been converted into an asylum for the insane, and here all of the lunatics in the three colonies of the Windward Islands Government are treated.

During the year 1900 there were 26 admissions—18 local, 1 from St. Lucia, and 7 from St. Vincent; 10 patients were discharged, and 17 died. The daily average was 126.

POOR ASYLUM

The old barracks adjoining Fort Matthew on Richmond Hill are used as the Poor Asylum, which is virtually a Hospital for Incurables, the cases admitted on account of absolute destitution unaccompanied by disease being comparatively few in number.

The daily average in 1900 was 38. There were 19 admissions, 18 deaths, and 7 who left of their own accord. The cost of each inmate per day was about sixpence.

THE HAMILTON ALMSHOUSE

This institution was founded by Lady Hamilton, the wife of a former Lieutenant-Governor of the colony, and the premises, which are situated in Lucas Street, St. George's, were thoroughly repaired under the auspices of Lady Sendall in 1888, and again in 1898 from funds raised by Lady Moloney. It is supported by voluntary contributions, and seven inmates who are respectable women in straitened circumstances are thus provided for. The present sole trustee is the Anglican Rector of St. George's, the Hon. Sec. is Mrs. G. C. Bayly, Fort Cottage, and the Hon. Treasurer is Miss Davis, Hospital Street, St. George's.

THE PUBLIC LIBRARY

The Library, which was first opened in 1846, was in 1888 thoroughly reorganised by the present Colonial Secretary, in whose care it has since remained as Executive Member of the Committee. In 1892 it was transferred to a newly-erected and handsome building between the St. George's Club and the Government Offices, facing the principal landing place on the Carenage of St. George's. It contains about 4,000 volumes, and is carefully kept up to date in literature by annual importations of books. All of the best English newspapers and English and American periodicals are regularly procured, and there is no charge for reading them or any of the books, provided they are not taken from the library. Persons wishing to borrow books must pay a subscription of one shilling per quarter, which entitles them to the loan of one work at a time. Residents in the out-districts can elect to pay a double subscription, and are then entitled to receive and return their books by inland parcel post free of charge.

The Librarian's salary, £100, and a grant of £150 per annum are paid from general revenue annually for the maintenance of the Institution, while the subscriptions are paid into the Treasury as a set-off; the number of subscribers is at present over 150.

The Library is open from 10 A.M. to 9 P.M. daily, except on Sundays and holidays. There is a complete catalogue on sale for a shilling, which includes the cost of separate sheets containing works added since its publication.

THE LAW LIBRARY

A grant of £30 per annum is made for the maintenance of this library, which is under the control of the Chief Justice and Attorney-General. It was thoroughly remodelled by Sir Joseph Hutchinson, the late Chief Justice, in 1896, and now contains about 500 volumes, which are kept in the Council Chamber at York House, where the Supreme and Magistrates' Courts hold their sittings, and the Chief Justice and the Attorney-General have their chambers.

CLUBS AND SOCIETIES

St. George's Club

The St. George's Club was organised in the early part of the year 1888, and opened in June of that year. The Club premises, which are leased, are situated on the Carenage, next to the Public Library and Government Offices, a site which secures both a charming outlook and a continuous sea breeze. The initiation of the movement which led to the founding of the Club was largely due to Mr. A. P. Short, and much of the subsequent success which has attended it has been attributable to the skill with which he conducted his duties as its first Hon. Secretary.

The Governor of the colony is always the President, and the management is conducted by a Committee consisting of the three Vice-Presidents and seven annually elected members, details being entrusted to an Hon. Secretary, also elected annually. Elections are in the hands of an Election Committee, consisting of the Committee of Management and five members of the Club, elected annually. No one is eligible for election as a member until he has resided in the colony for three months, and until his application has been posted up, and notified to members of the Election Committee at least eight weeks prior to the date of election.

Temporary members may be admitted upon approval of the nomination by the Managing Committee, and the privileges of such membership may be extended for six months on payment of half a guinea per month. All commissioned officers of the Army and Navy are admitted as honorary members for fourteen days, and officers of the vessels of the R. M. S. P. Co. are also honorary members.

The entrance fee is five guineas, and the annual subscription, four guineas for residents in St. George's and three guineas for country members. There are at present 64 members.

The Club has arranged an exchange of hospitality with the Grosvenor Club, New Bond Street, London.

President: His Excellency Sir Robert Llewelyn, K.C.M.G.

Hon. Sec.: H. C. Saviile.

Grenada Race Club

The Grenada Race Club was started in January 1895, with the object of promoting the introduction of a better breed of horses, by encouraging properly conducted race meetings in the colony every year, at which suitable prizes would be offered to horses foaled in the West Indies. The original mover in the matter was Mr. E. M. De Freitas, and the enterprise has already been very successful. The members of the Club are numerous and influential, and the first races under its auspices were held on the Grand Ance Course in May 1895, with satisfactory results; the last meeting was in February 1897, when several horses from Trinidad were entered.

There is a universal system of counting and charging messages, as follows:—

The maximum length of a chargeable word is fixed at fifteen letters. Should a word contain more than fifteen letters, every fifteen or fraction of fifteen letters is counted as a word, but in the address of the message the name of the delivery office and the name of the country in which it has to

Code messages (in which are included messages only partly in code) must not contain words exceeding ten letters in length. They may be composed of words in the English, French, German, Italian, Dutch, Portuguese, Spanish, and Latin languages. Proper names (i.e. names of persons and places) are not allowed in the text of code messages, except in the manner they are used in ordinary private messages.

Cipher messages may be composed either wholly or partly of figures or letters, or of a combination of words and figures, words and letters, or words, figures and letters, constructed for the purpose of concealing the meaning and intention of the sender; messages composed of words not to be found in any European language are charged as cipher messages.

Figures are charged at rate of five to a word, plus one word for any excess. The same rule applies in counting groups of letters.

GOVERNMENT TELEPHONE SERVICE

There are six telephone exchanges in the island, connected by about 106 miles of duplicated trunk lines, and with 201 connections, employing about 450 miles of wire. By this means rapid and easy communication between all parts of the island is secured.

Connections to an exchange where the premises are within the boundary of a town are made free of charge for the first cost of wire, poles, &c., and the same rule is observed with respect to premises within a radius of half a mile from the St. David's police station; beyond those limits renters either refund the cost of making the connection, or pay an additional rental thereon at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum on the first cost, which is £3 10s. a mile where no poles other than those upon an existing line are required.

Vessels at anchor in the St. George's Carenage are connected with the system on payment (except in the case of a man-of-war) of a small fee, which, together with the other rates of rent and charges for transmission of messages, will be found on pp. 107-108.

The instruments generally in use are the Hunning's double receiver combination sets manufactured by the Western Electric Co.

The business hours of the exchanges are from 6 A.M. to 9 P.M., except on Sundays, when they open at 7 A.M. and are closed for ordinary business from 10 A.M. to 2 P.M., closing again at 7 P.M. Urgent calls are of course dealt with at all hours of the night or day.

The cost of constructing the system was about £4,500, the interest and sinking fund on which are duly paid to the Treasury annually. The revenue is about £1,100 per annum, and the expenditure (including loan charges) about the same.

DOLLAR AND STERLING TABLES

(The dollar = 4s. 2d.)

To reduce Dollars to Sterling.—Divide the given sum of dollars and cents by 4·80, the value of a pound sterling in dollars and cents, and the quotient will be pounds sterling, and decimals of a pound, which latter should then be reduced to shillings and pence.

To reduce Sterling to Dollars.—Express the amount of sterling money decimally, and multiply by 4·80, the value of a pound sterling in dollars and cents.

The following tables give the reduced amounts for round numbers:—

<sup>1</sup> It is said that the French gave it this name because they found serpents on it similar to those of Martinique; if so, they are now extinct.
